ABOUT ME

ADHD, procrastination, distraction, self-worth, anxiety. All obstacles I've had to overcome to get to where I am today.

Over the past 22 years, I've served in the small business, corporate and government sectors and experienced first-hand both the benefits and hardships of living with autism. Despite many obstacles, I now run a successful coaching and training business helping others achieve what I have achieved in relation to my career.

My framework for developing the key skills needed to enter the workforce will revolutionise how you see yourself and what you believe you're capable of. In fact, you'll be well-equipped to reject any job that doesn't offer what you're looking for.

I work with autistic individuals who want to get the most out of life but need that extra supporting hand.

I've been there and done that. Worked in toxic environments, had business failures and started all over again only to use my previous experience and the support of others to come back bigger and better than ever.
